ONE WATER TO RULE THEM ALL

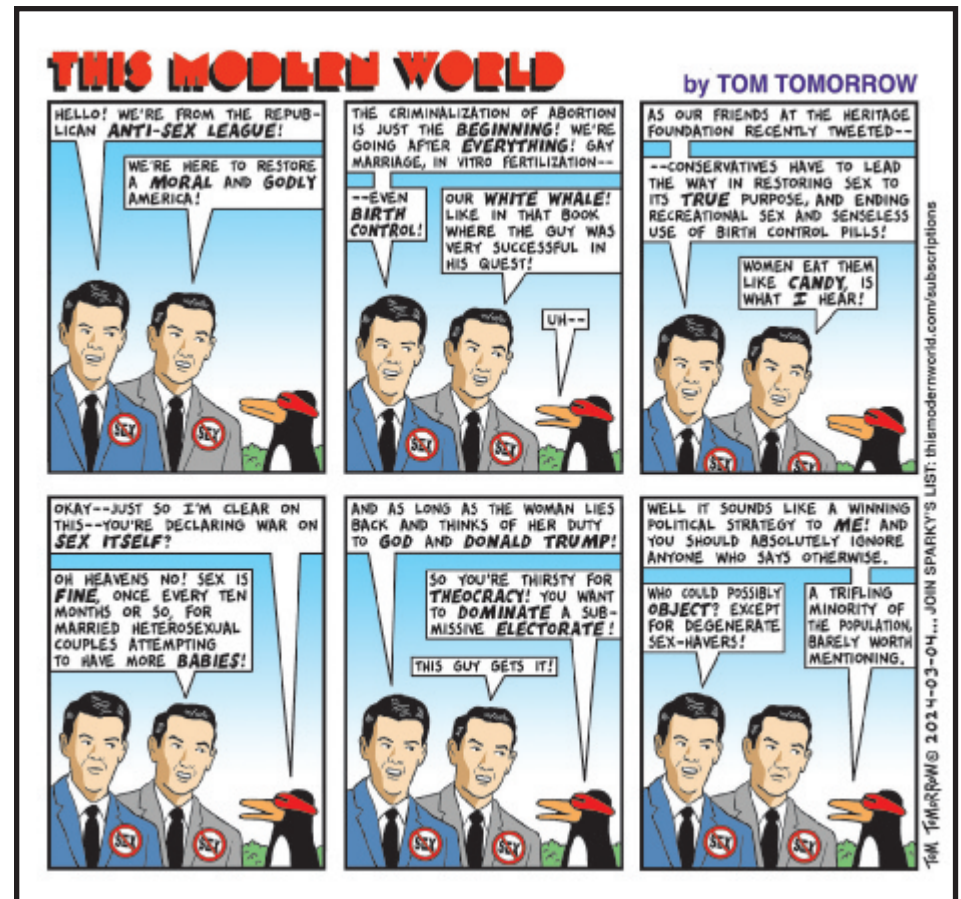

Dear Editor,
In a previous letter to the editor ["Save Roy Creek," Feedback, Feb. 23], the Mirasol Springs project, along the Pedernales River near where it is crossed by Hamilton Pool Road, is asserted to be in "West Austin," and it is claimed the draw on local groundwater would threaten "the well-being of fellow Austinites and the place we call home." Indeed water usage there can be called to question, but to pose it as an "Austin" problem strains credulity. It's a Hill Country problem. The situation is reviewed on the Waterblogue at [waterblogue.com], setting forth a "One Water" scheme, a water infrastructure model that would drastically reduce draw on the area's water supplies. The 27-million-gallon annual usage that previous letter asserted is 83 acre-feet per year, but as the Waterblogue reviews, demand on local sources could be way below that, by basing a goodly portion of water supply on building-scale rainwater harvesting, with reclaimed "waste" water fulfilling a large portion of, maybe even all, irrigation demands. Using the "One Water" scheme - husbanding all the water that flows through our communities - for water supply, "waste" water management, and storm water management would be more fiscally reasonable for the developer while saving a whole lot of water for society and significantly blunting water quality degradation. This could be a real "One Water" showcase, an opportunity to actually set, as the developer claims in the banner of its "vision" page, a "new standard for environmentally focused Hill Country development." Rather than just greenwashing a very conventional set of practices, which is where this project is currently heading. We can, and should, do better to preserve and protect the Hill Country water environment. Please consider how you can advocate for them to go with the "One Water" scheme instead. Thank you.

David Venhuizen, P.E.

ABBOTT GETTING WHAT HE WANTS:

Gov. Greg Abbott vowed political revenge against fellow Republicans in the Texas House after two dozen of them joined Democrats in last year’s legislative session to tank his school voucher proposal. To that end, Abbott contributed millions to pro-school choice candidates and incumbents in 30 House races for the March primary, the Statesman reported. Yesterday’s election shows that the money worked. Almost half of the incumbent R’s lost outright. The prospects for the approval of vouchers just got a lot brighter.

Gov. Greg Abbott

AND KEN PAXTON TOO:

Another Republican in the crosshairs of the far right this election season is

Speaker of the House Dade Phelan. A.G. Ken Paxton led the charge for Phelan to be primaried, after the speaker approved Paxton’s impeachment by the House last May. Now, Phelan is in a run-off with challenger David Covey. In addition to Phelan, Paxton has campaigned against 35 House Republicans. The Dallas Morning News reported 20 of the 35 beat their challengers.

AND EVEN MORE REPUBLICAN

INFIGHTING: Paxton’s revenge tour did not stop with House Republicans. He was enraged with eight of the judges on the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals for ruling against him in 2021. Paxton targeted three of the judges up for reelection in this year’s primary and all have been voted out.

The total eclipse is entirely different from the partial eclipses Austin has seen in recent years

GETTY IMAGES

The Total Solar Eclipse Is Coming

The once-in-a-lifetime darkness will bring hordes of tourists to Central Texas BY ROBYN ROSS

At 1:36pm on Monday, April 8, the sun will disappear, and the sky over Austin will go dark.

Perhaps you saw the partial eclipse in August 2017 or caught the annular “ring of fire” eclipse last October. A total solar eclipse – when the moon passes between the sun and the Earth, completely blocking the sun – is an entirely different experience. A strip of land in the moon’s shadow, called the path of totality, is plunged into twilight in the middle of the day. Those who have witnessed a total eclipse say it’s a mystical, awe-inspiring, even life-changing event.

Local officials have just over a month to finish preparing for the eclipse and for the thousands of visitors who will travel to see it.

No one knows exactly how many people are coming to Austin. Most estimates of eclipse visitation come from GreatAmericanEclipse.com, the project of eclipse chaser and geographer Michael Zeiler. His model is based primarily on population data and the placement of major highways. It assumes Texas will have better weather, and thus more visitors, than spots farther north.

Zeiler’s model, which he said proved accurate for the 2017 eclipse, projects that up to 1.08 million people will travel by car to a Texas destination for the eclipse. Zeiler has forecasted visitation for a few towns in the path – Kerrville should prepare for a whopping potential 488,000 guests – but he says Austin’s number is harder to predict.

Because it’s at the edge of the path of totality, it’s not as desirable a destination as towns farther west. But out-of-state visitors heading to those towns will fly into Austin

LOW PRIMARY TURNOUT, AS ALWAYS:

Voter turnout in the March primary was significantly lower in early voting than in the 2020 election, despite the state gaining more registered voters in the last four years, The Texas Tribune reported this week.

ZURAWSKI HONORED: Thursday, USA

Today announced that Austin's Amanda Zurawski is the Texas honoree for USA Today's Women of the Year. Zurawski is the lead plaintiff in the Center for Reproductive Rights lawsuit challenging Texas' abortion laws, having nearly died due to a spreading infection after she was denied an abortion in 2022.

NONPROFIT CUTS OFF HEDGE FUND

PAPERS: Speaking of USA Today, it's owned by Gannett, a corporation known for hollowing out local newspapers (including the Statesman). Report for America, which sends hundreds of journalists into local newsrooms, announced this week it will no longer partner with hedge fund- or private equity-owned businesses including Gannett, writing that business models like Gannett's "[aren't] the future for robust local news."

TRIBUNE PARTNERS WITH FRONTLINE:

In good news for local journalism, The Texas Tribune announced its partnership with Frontline, the investigative documentary series by PBS. The partnership will aid reporters in analyzing immigration and politics along the border in a critical election year, the Tribune announced.

TRUMP <3 ABBOTT: In a perfect example of the border's role in the presidential election, Donald Trump said Abbott is on his short list of vice presidential candidates during his visit to the border last week (at the same time that Joe Biden was there). Sean Hannity asked during his show if Abbott was under consideration. "He's done a great job," Trump replied. "Yeah, certainly he would be somebody I would very much consider."

or San Antonio, and that weekend is already a busy one here: the Capitol 10,000 race is Sunday morning, and the CMT Music Awards are Sunday night. Plus, April is a popular time to visit Central Texas.

"I would not say that we are actively promoting our city as a place to come see the eclipse, because we know that they're already coming," says Wesley Lucas, Visit Austin's director of communications. Visit Austin's survey of hotels indicates that, for eclipse weekend, Downtown hotels are at 73% occupancy and hotels citywide are at 50% occupancy – twice the advance bookings typically seen this time of year. (For context, Formula 1 weekend finishes with hotels at 85% to 95% occupancy.)

Anticipating overwhelming visitation, many Hill Country towns have been holding town hall meetings to help residents prepare, and some have appointed an eclipse coordinator to lead preparations. School districts have canceled classes to reduce traffic. Some towns are hosting a large public viewing in a centrally located park.

Austin, a larger city more accustomed to hosting major events, is handling things differently.

Astronomy educator Lucia Brimer and Hill Country Alliance Night Sky Program Manager Dawn Davies were two of the first Austinites to push for eclipse readiness. By September 2022, they were convening monthly meetings with an education-oriented task force that included representatives from the Thinkery, UT-Austin, the Austin Astronomical Society, and Austin Community College. The group's primary aim was to coordinate their dispersed eclipse-day activities.

Traffic management and emergency preparation were not in the group's wheelhouse.

So, on Nov. 2, Brimer, Davies and a task force colleague testified before City Council in support of a resolution sponsored by Council Member Alison Alter directing city staff to create a plan for the eclipse by Feb. 1. The resolution, which Council approved, asked staff to launch a campaign to make the public aware of the eclipse; disseminate safety information through multiple alert systems and in multiple languages; host viewings at libraries and parks; and anticipate increased demand for emergency services.

The Office of Homeland Security and Emergency Management released the city's response on Feb. 27. The memo says the department plans to share information through a press conference in early April – shortly before eclipse day – and points residents to readycentraltexas.org/eclipse, where eclipse and eye safety information can be translated into multiple languages. Police, fire and EMS are prepared to increase staffing around April 8, and Homeland Security has been coordinating with the 10-county Capital Area Council of Governments (CAPCOG) and TxDOT on safety and traffic issues.

At a Feb. 21 meeting of CAPCOG emergency managers, attendees discussed plans to provide fuel for emergency vehicles even if gas stations run out. They reviewed the communications channels first responders will use in the likely event that cell networks in the western counties are overwhelmed. They talked about how to handle visitors' emergencies when the region's hospitals are already stretched to capacity.

Still, said CAPCOG Director of Homeland Security Martin Ritchey, "No matter how much planning a local government, county government, the region and the state do, it's really going to come down to the individual's preparedness."

HERE'S HOW YOU CAN HELP:

1) Decide where you'll be on Monday, April 8. The link at the QR code (t.ly/5X78l) shows the path of totality. Everywhere within the path will experience the total solar eclipse; totality will last longer closer to the blue centerline. In Austin, the partial eclipse begins at 12:17pm and totality lasts about two minutes starting at 1:36pm. The city recommends Austinites watch close to their homes, workplaces, or schools to cut down on traffic.

2) If you plan to travel, bring extra food, water, diapers, toilet paper, and cash (ATMs may run out, and card transactions might not work if cell networks go down), along with a paper map (communication networks may be overwhelmed).

3) Obtain your safety glasses now. Be sure they meet the ISO 12312-2 safety standard. In 2017, unsafe counterfeit glasses – some with the ISO symbol – proliferated on Amazon, so the American Astronomical Society this year compiled a list of trusted manufacturers, available at t.ly/O06M5. Parks and Recreation Department facilities will distribute 10,000 pairs of glasses beginning March 11, and library branches will have a limited supply available shortly before April 8.

4) Share information about the eclipse with people in your community, especially those who don't speak English.

5) Find out what your child's school plans to do on April 8. AISD is holding classes and will provide eclipse glasses for students and staff. If you're staying in town for the eclipse, buy groceries and gas before April 5. Follow readycentraltexas.org/eclipse for safety and event updates. ■

"I would not say that we are actively promoting our city as a place to come see the eclipse, because we know that they're already coming."

YouTube Music workers rally in 2023

LINA FISHER

YouTube Music Workers Laid Off in Possible Retaliation for Organizing

City Council lends support BY LINA FISHER

At last week's City Council meeting, a group of local unionized Google contractors were preparing to speak on a resolution from Council Member Zo Qadri that would send a formal message from Council in support of their negotiation efforts. As they took the podium, Katie-Marie Marschner got a text from a colleague at the office: The entire team had been laid off, effective immediately. She informed her colleague on the podium (captured in a clip that has since gone viral), and when she got back to the office to pick up her things, she says she was met with hostility from HR, who told her she was trespassing before calling police.

Since a group of 40 YouTube Music workers voted to join the Alphabet Workers Union early last year, the union has filed nine unfair labor practice charges with the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) for Google's refusal to bargain and other apparent retaliations. Google's contention is that they aren't really the employer, because YouTube Music workers are technically hired by Cognizant, a subsidiary of Google. The NLRB has ruled that Cognizant and Google are indeed joint employers, but the tech giant refuses to accept that and is appealing the decision in federal court.

The workers' cause has been supported nationally by Sen. Bernie Sanders and Rep. Greg Casar, but it seems Google's powerful influence still sways Council. Right before workers were set to speak on Qadri's resolution, they were informed it had been pulled and postponed at Google's request. After the public firing, Qadri placed the resolution back on the agenda. It passed 9-1, with Mackenzie Kelly abstaining. Turns out, Kelly had worked to delay the vote at the request of Katharine McAden, head of public policy and external affairs for Google's Southern U.S. region. An email obtained by the Chronicle shows McAden contacted Council Tuesday reminding them how Google has "invested heavily in the Austin-area, supporting local initiatives, and working to effectively grow workforce opportunities."

During the meeting, Kelly explained her refusal to support the resolution, saying "the city should refrain from intervening in the affairs of private companies."

The rest of Council disagreed: Qadri wrote in a statement post-vote that "Austin is a union city, and as the sponsor of this resolution, I will always stand with labor. What happened today was unconscionable... those workers were paid below living wage in Austin, despite working for a multi-billion dollar Fortune 100 company. And now, without warning, they've lost their jobs."

Over the weekend, workers met with their organizer to discuss next steps. "We're looking at the full range of legal options within the NLRB and elsewhere. We believe [this layoff] to be an illegal act of retaliation," said another laid-off employee, Sam Regan. In the meantime, the workers have been placed on "the bench," a tech industry concept similar to severance. The team will continue to receive their existing pay and benefits for seven weeks and are encouraged to apply for other positions within Cognizant. Regan and Marschner say they've heard anecdotally that no one gets hired from the bench, and they aren't keen to continue working for this company anyway. For the last year, their team had been training another one in India, "mirroring ours in terms of size and division of labor. We watched it happen and knew something was awfully fishy about it. And once that team was built up enough, they fired us."

Nationally, a new NLRB rule that took effect in December makes it easier for contract workers to unionize – a powerful tool against tech giants that rely on third-party employers. Under the rule, a company is considered an employer if they control working conditions like pay and scheduling. However, even under the much more conservative previous Trump-era rule, the NLRB still sided with the workers. As Google's appeal is heard by the federal court, Regan says "it'll be really interesting to see how this [new rule] plays out. I know a lot of people are watching." ■

TEXAS CAN'T TRUMP FEDERAL IMMIGRATION LAW: Is Abbott doing “a great job” though? A federal judge in Austin, U.S. District Judge David Ezra, issued a preliminary injunction last week that will keep Texas’ extreme immigration law Senate Bill 4 from being enforced while the court challenge against it plays out. Ezra explained that the state’s disagreement with federal immigration policy doesn’t justify violating the Supremacy Clause.

BUT ABBOTT PROJECTS CONFIDENCE: Abbott tweeted about Ezra’s decision Thursday, saying he’s “not worried,” because the Supreme Court will decide in the end. “Texas has solid legal grounds to defend against an invasion,” he wrote. Those grounds are based on the Constitution’s allowance for states to defend themselves against acts of war. Three individual appeals courts already ruled in the 1990s that immigration doesn’t qualify as an invasion, Bloomberg Law reported.

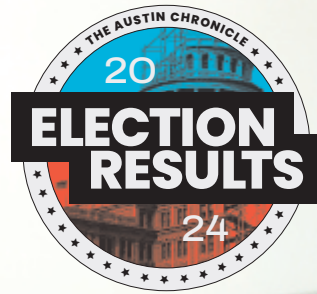

DROUGHT RELIEF, FOR NOW: Luckily, there’s some good news at home. The Barton Springs/Edwards Aquifer Conservation District is now in the least severe drought stage. The district entered the most severe drought state for the first time in its 36-year history in December. Rain in January and February brought the severity down in March, the Austin Monitor reported.

CITY MANAGER SEARCH NARROWS: We’re also getting closer to stability at City Hall. Tuesday, Mayor Kirk Watson announced the three finalists in City Council’s quest to find Austin’s next city manager. After reviewing 39 applications, Dallas City Manager T.C. Broadnax, Denton City Manager Sara Hensley, and Kansas City, Mo., City Manager Brian Platt made the list. Council members will interview the finalists March 26 and could vote on a contract with their preferred candidate as soon as April 2.

District Attorney José Garza in December 2023

JANA BIRCHUM

Despite Being Vastly Outspent by Challenger, José Garza’s Progressive Message Still Has Austin’s Support

After winning primary in a landslide, Garza is certain to win reelection BY AUSTIN SANDERS

Travis County’s incumbent District Attorney José Garza prevailed over his well-funded challenger Jeremy Sylestine in a decisive victory in the March 5 Democratic race.

Garza ended the night with a 33% lead over Sylestine, according to unofficial results posted by the Travis County Clerk’s Office. The result represents a commanding victory for the progressive D.A., who has been the target of right-wing attacks since emerging as a serious threat to prior D.A. Margaret Moore in 2020. Sylestine, who mounted a challenge to Garza late in the candidate filing period for the primary, was supported by moderate Democrats like Moore, Republican donors and voters, the Austin Police Association (APA President Michael Bullock has been present for campaign events), and late in the game, even Elon Musk.

In the 2020 election, which was held during the pinnacle of the 2020 summer of protest in support of the Black Lives Matter movement, Garza defeated Moore – an establishment figure well-liked by law enforcement – by more than 30 points. Since then, Garza has not faced a public test of how Travis County residents view his progressive, and somewhat controversial, approach to the top law enforcement job in the county. His term has been defined by efforts to divert more people from jail, pursuing shorter prison sentences in some cases, and prosecuting law enforcement officials accused of using excessive force on-duty.

But Garza has now replicated 2020’s resounding victory – in a less favorable election environment, no less – which he said signals broad support for those policies that have drawn the ire of high-powered Republicans, including lawmakers who passed legislation last year to force D.A.s to prosecute abortion and anti-LGBT cases. “Our movement is stronger even now than when we started,” Garza told supporters from the stage at Hotel Vegas, about two hours after polls closed and it was clear he had fended off Sylestine. “Let me say this: Our movement to fix our broken criminal justice system is here to stay.”

In his remarks to supporters, Garza referenced another prominent aspect of the race – the coalescing of Republican support around Sylestine and the infusion of extreme, right-wing messaging in support of Sylestine’s campaign. “Anonymous dark-money organizations spent untold dollars promoting lies and peddling misinformation to try to scare voters into turning their backs on progress,” Garza told supporters. “In the face of those negative attacks, it would have been understandable for us to lose heart and give in to that fear and intimidation but ... this community didn’t take the bait.”

The “dark-money organization” Garza referenced was Saving Austin, an unregistered political action committee based out of the Dallas suburb of Irving. A week before election day, Saving Austin mailed Travis County voters a campaign ad in support of Sylestine that featured an adult hand covering the mouth of a child and a message saying Garza’s policies have “filled Austin’s streets with pedophiles and killers.” The shocking ad roiled Austin’s mostly liberal Democratic voting base and prompted Sylestine to issue a statement disavowing the message and declaring his campaign had no part in crafting or transmitting it.

Even without accounting for outside expenditures, Sylestine vastly outspent Garza; a Feb. 26 campaign finance report from Sylestine shows more than $1.2 million in expenditures by his campaign. The massive financial support came mostly from wealthy Austinites and high-dollar GOP donors. A report from Garza covering the same time period shows about $137,000 in expenditures.

Shortly after early vote results were posted and it was clear Garza had amassed an insurmountable lead over Sylestine, the challenger told the Chronicle he was proud of the “moderate message” he campaigned on around public safety, but regretted that “extreme” messaging drowned it out. “We had a moderate message that got hijacked by people that had different intentions,” Sylestine told us. “I was never one to come in and try to divide the party, but there’s a lot of space that’s been ignored in that moderate area.”

It is possible the extreme messages turned off some voters. Garza not only did well in East Austin, where his base of support lives, but even in most of Central and large parts of West Austin, where Sylestine's financial support centered.

Sylestine's campaign featured support from Travis County crime victims who were displeased with their interactions with Garza's office. Sylestine said he hopes the incumbent, who will serve another four years as D.A., will listen to those concerns. "I hope he can do that in a way that honors his campaign and creates a conversation in the future."

As for Garza, he told us that he's looking at continuing to make progress on reforming the local justice system. "Travis County is one of the safest communities in the country and we're going to continue full speed ahead," Garza said. "We are working to address the root causes of crimes in our community because we know that that approach works, and we know that people support it overwhelmingly. So that's what we're gonna continue to do."

Garza will face off against Daniel Betts, who ran unopposed in the Republican primary, in the Nov. 5 general election. Because more than two-thirds of Travis County voters typically vote Democratic, Garza is almost certain to win. ■

"We had a moderate message that got hijacked by people that had different intentions."

LET'S TALK IT OUT: Austin police haven't had a contract with the city in a long time. Nearly one year after the 2018 meet and confer agreement between the city and Austin Police Association expired and negotiations over a new labor contract ended, Watson announced that talks between the city and APA would resume next week. Formal negotiations will resume March 13.

SETON NURSES FINALLY WIN CONTRACT WITH ASCENSION: There must be something astrological going on with contracts this week. More than 1,000 unionized nurses at Ascension Seton Medical Center on 38th ratified their first-ever three-year contract with Catholic health care giant Ascension on Monday, after a contentious bargaining battle that lasted the better part of two years. Nurses held two strikes to draw attention to working conditions and supply shortages affecting patient care.

OVER-THE-COUNTER BIRTH CONTROL: Don't wanna have a baby while Ascension is still figuring out how many baby blankets they need in the NICU? Try the new over-the-counter birth control pill. Approved by the FDA, it will become available starting late March in retail pharmacies including CVS and Walgreens. A one-month supply of the pill will cost $19.99, The 19th reported.

Sherine Thomas Unseats Incumbent in Family-Focused 353rd Court, Takes On Backlog

She aims to have streamlined court processes in the first six months BY MAGGIE Q. THOMPSON

Sherine Thomas is a believer in the American dream, but she didn't expect to become a judge. When her mother emigrated from India, she came alone, recruited in the early 1970s as the United States struggled with a nursing shortage. She wrote home to her husband and two daughters every night, sometimes crying, sometimes too tired to start over when tears smudged the ink. "A lot of people sacrificed for this," Thomas told the Chronicle Wednesday.

She said becoming a lawyer, let alone a judge, "wasn't necessarily the specific plan. But it was the hope that my family had for us, to be able to do great, wonderful things. Little Sherine would not have thought this would be a thing. But I had the wonderful voices of my parents and my family and my sister saying, 'Yes, you can.'"

Thomas thinks it was both her decades of experience in Travis County's legal community and her perspective on the justice system's role that convinced 47,000 Democratic voters (56%) she was the right choice. "The courthouse was a symbol of the promise and potential of this country, and I wanted to make sure that we were living up to that promise and potential for everybody. I think that's what resonated."

In her bid for the 353rd Court, which handles family issues including child custody,

Thomas was up against incumbent Madeleine Connor and challenger Susana Castillo, a relatively new face in Travis County's political scene. Castillo's campaign focused on equal access to the justice system, especially for immigrants.

Connor said she's grateful to the 12,000 people who voted for her. "I believe that's a comment on my good work as a judge," she said. Connor has been a controversial judge, as she was twice deemed a vexatious litigant and, in an unusual move, ran for a different district judge seat (419th) while still in office, which would have left the 353rd open to a Gov. Greg Abbott appointee. Connor said she's looking forward to serving out the remainder of her term, "with the same judicial curiosity and civility as I've demonstrated throughout my tenure. My goal was, and always has been, providing a level playing field to the citizens of this county." She emphasized that her colleagues are all "kind, smart, and selfless. They all deserve their seats. I'm sure Sherine will fit right in."

Thomas said she hopes to shadow Judge Connor and other civil court judges before she takes office. Her focus, at first, will be on efficiency and clearing up backlogged cases. She hopes to have the backlog cleared in six months. When her own court is in order, she plans to work with other district judges to expand existing programs that connect people in every court to free legal resources. "I do think we have some great inroads into those conversations, and I can't do any of that alone," Thomas said. "But I don't think the judges that are on the bench right now are going to be hurdles. Rather, they're gonna be really great teammates figuring out where the pitfalls are so we can overcome them." ■

"The courthouse was a symbol of the promise and potential of this country, and I wanted to make sure that we were living up to that promise and potential for everybody."

TANISA JEFFERS WINS BIG IN JP5 CONTEST

She will lead county's main evictions court BY BRANT BINGAMON

It was after 10:30pm when the Chronicle finally caught up with Tanisa Jeffers. She had awoken an hour earlier, learned she had won the contest for Justice of the Peace Precinct 5, and headed down to the post-election party at Hotel Vegas.

"I apologize, I'm still rubbing the sleep out of my eyes," Jeffers said. "I work at night. I'm a night court judge, and I sleep during the daytime. I've got to be at work in 20 minutes, but I'm here."

At that point it had been three hours since early voting results showed Jeffers with a wide lead over her opponents, Rick Olivo, the current judge of JP5, and Travis County prosecutor Ornela DeSeta. Jeffers wound up taking 61% of the vote to Olivo's 20% and DeSeta's 19%. The margin of victory surprised some people, and Jeffers was one of them.

"We were preparing for the run-off," she said. "We were trying to be judicious with our resources, because we knew that was a big, big possibility."

JP5 is one of Travis County's busiest courts – Olivo has called it "the people's court." It handles misdemeanors, including bond and eviction cases. Olivo has led the court since September of 2023, when the Travis County Commissioners Court chose him over Jeffers to succeed Nick Chu, who had stepped down after six years of progressive leadership on the bench. Olivo had the most judicial experience of the candidates the commissioners had to choose from.

The race for JP5 was Jeffers' third in the last four years, after she lost to Dimple Malhotra for County Court at Law No. 4 in 2020 and Mary Ann Espiritu for CC5 in 2022. She's been an attorney in Austin for two decades and already served as a magistrate judge for the county's JP courts. As a Black woman, she told us she believes it's important for Travis County to have Black judges on the bench, especially in JP5, where a disproportionate number of people facing eviction are people of color. She is excited that she'll now be able to explore more options for helping tenants facing eviction, including the use of an Eviction Diversion Court.

Jeffers also said she hopes limiting evictions can help with Austin's housing affordability problem. "There's a housing crisis in Austin," she said. "I mean, I cannot afford to live here anymore and I'm a judge, right? We need to go forward and push this envelope. And it's going to start with our local JP to properly handle all the evictions that we've had as a result of coming out of the pandemic." ■

Evidence: The gallery's newest show brings together the colorful and provocative work of four women artists – Aubree Dale, Aria Brownell, Wendy Rhode, and Barbara Miñarro – “who explore the relationships between individual identity and the collective, the process of making art and of making one's self.”

Brazilian trans poet Anderson Bigode Herzer lived a wild life full of loss and struggle, which he utilized to create literary art. While confined to a youth correctional facility for most of his teen years, Anderson wrote one of the first trans masculine memoirs in his poetry collection A queda para o alto. He passed at 20 after taking his own life, a sadly still-occurring outcome for today's trans youth. NOTHING IS OFF-LIMITS FOR GIANMARCO SORESI

“When a joke works, it sets off a fire for me to want to be funny,” says comedian Gianmarco Soresi, known for his high-energy live shows. “I think that’s what’s cool about the whole art form. It’s like if they’re trying to shock start your heart back to pumping again.”

Soresi’s tumultuous childhood and divorced parents are the main jumping-off points for his stand-up shows. Born in Potomac, Maryland, the entertainer originally pursued musical theatre but later found his calling making people laugh. “I ended up writing a play for myself where I talked to the audience and found that’s where all of the positive feedback was,” Soresi says. “So, I pivoted to stand-up and haven’t looked back.”

With over 40 dates on his ongoing “Leaning In” tour, Soresi is making up for lost time. The comedian first began touring on the cusp of the COVID-19 pandemic, which was inevitably halted, and picked back up mid-2021. Since then, he’s been flying back and forth from his home in New York to the next touring city every week, covering as much ground as one can manage. “That’s my whole life,” says Soresi.

Between spontaneous crowd work and in-depth, often sardonic storytelling, Soresi loves to push the envelope when it comes to who and what he can joke about. Otherwise risqué jokes revolving around controversial figures like Michael Jackson and R. Kelly garner unwavering waves of laughter from his audiences. “I think the edge is what gets people excited,” he admits. “It’s like finding those narrow pockets that I think are fun. I think it gives you the same feeling as watching a tightrope walker.”

Soresi’s dark sense of humor always seems to be a crowd-pleaser. Fiery quips when working a room come as second nature to the comic, in addition to intriguing tales about topics like uncomfortable auditions and liberal churches. Soresi’s stand-up has been featured on Comedy Central, PBS, Amazon, and Netflix, with his 2020 special Shelf Life earning three New York Emmy nominations.

In addition to his sarcastic jests, the comic also spearheads comedy podcast The Downside With Gianmarco Soresi, where he and his co-host Russell Daniels home in on the negative side of life. “I wanted to have a show where guests could come on and instead of talking about why they’re grateful for this, that, or the other thing, they get to share the things that annoy them,” he says. “That’s ultimately what you do with friends. You don’t feel the need to maintain appearances, and that’s what the podcast is.”

Just having passed the halfway mark of his current tour, Soresi doesn’t plan on stopping anytime soon. Often doing multiple shows a night, the comic is cautious of avoiding burnout while still eager to make the most of his shows. “If I do feel burnt out, the moment I get that first laugh, I’m back in it,” says Soresi. “Whenever I start a show, I immediately feel okay.”

DAY TRIPS

BY GERALD E. MCLEOD

GERALD E. MCLEOD

Pecan Grove Store, in the rolling hills outside of Fredericksburg, defies the touristy trappings of its urban neighbor.

Almost a decade old, the former Sinclair gas station has been turned into a family-friendly, old-fashioned roadhouse with good food and great ambience. Situated north of town on scenic TX-16 and a few miles from the wildflower explosion known as the Willow City Loop, the Store is a destination all by itself.

Lawrence Segner opened the combination service station, store, and garage around 1957. For many years it was the local hangout for cold beer. The buildings sat vacant for nearly 20 years after he died in 1993.

As a young man, Rick Martin had downed a few cold ones at the gas station and loved Lawrence's homemade German sausage. When the property came up for sale, Rick's was the second offer the family received. The heirs accepted his offer because he promised not to raze the buildings, nor turn the place into another winery.

At first, Rick said, he planned to use the buildings to store his collection of antique motorcycles and cars.

His son, Matt, came up with a different idea. In 2014, Matt opened the old store as a bar with live music.

Using his grandmother's hamburger recipe perfected by his father, Matt added the "Dino Burger" named after the green dinosaur on the Sinclair sign out front. Big and juicy, the American classic was voted "best burger in Fredericksburg" the last four years running.

Pecan Grove Store is 5.5 miles north of Fredericksburg on TX-16, one of the prettiest roads in Texas, especially during wildflower season. The bar and burger joint has a large biergarten out back along Marschall Creek where musicians take the stage in the spring and fall. The kitchen is open Wednesday evenings, and Thursday through Saturday 11:30am to 8:30pm. They also have a campground and bunkhouse next door available through Airbnb.

SATURDAY 9, KITTY COHEN'S

If you follow Chupie the Chupacabra's Instagram, this meet & greet is already in your datebook, and if you don't, put this paper down and give the little nugget a follow, why dontcha. This cat is something else: looks exactly like a chupacabra, horks down tacos and fries like nobody's business, vibes tough as nails in a denim jacket, and has an absolutely DGAM attitude. Get away from the SXSW hubbub and swing by the always chic Kitty's to meet Chupie, offer a french fry, and throw some dollars in for Austin Pets Alive!

This Is Your Sign: Pisces Night

COMEDY MUSIC

SATURDAY 9, FALLOUT THEATER

Rihanna. Justin Bieber. Managing Editor James Renovitch. Yes, these are a few of the standout Pisces we all know and think highly of. But how can one truly explore the depths this fishy sign plumbs? For starters, you might check out comedian Jenn Rosario's astrology-themed show focused on these mutable marvels. Featuring an all-Pisces lineup, every zodiac sign will be bustin' a gut at sensational sets by local comics like Holly Hart, Natalie O'Sullivan Hamilton, Syd Goin, and Chris Hills. And there'll be music by Anna Grace and Neil Dorsey! Why even shoot for the moon when you can vibe with all these stars?

First Annual Pinvitational Cask Beer Fest FOOD

SATURDAY 9, HOLD OUT BREWING

In Austin, March begins a festival season that lasts all the way until Feb. 28 of the following year, so everyone should be thrilled to hear that a brand-new beer hoedown is setting up camp right at the cusp of this year's SXSW blowout: the Pinvitational Cask Fest. The mini-festival will feature 34 powerhouse brewers from around the city, state, and country bringing their own proprietary versions of cask-conditioned ales and lagers that are unfiltered, unpasteurized, and hand-pumped from beer vessels called pins (5.4 gallons) and firkins (10.8 gallons). No door sales, so hit Hold Out's website to buy your tickets early. — ERIC PUGA

The Kitsch Market MARKET

SUNDAY 10, SIDE KITSCH VINTAGE

Some of you never had a mom who dragged you around antiquing, and it shows in your Ikea-stuffed apartments. How about you live up the joint — and your outfits, your office, your life, even — by checking out this wide array of vintage, gifts, and more? Side Kitsch, attached to local coiffeur/ses Scissor Sisters Hair Show, contains tons of kooky artifacts from cool peoples past. Explore their indoor selection as well as a new slew of vendors outside. Gonna miss this Saturday's affair? Check back in on March 30, when they'll be doing it all again. — JAMES SCOTT

SUNDAY 10 - WEDNESDAY 13, CONVENTION CENTER

Heading to SXSW? Spruce up your professional portfolio with a new headshot, courtesy of Precision Camera & Video and Canon. Photographers will set up shop at the Convention Center from 9am to 4pm March 10-13. The first three days are exclusive to festival badge holders, but admission is free to the public on the final day. Organizers also promise an "immersive hands-on experience with Canon's Cinema Line," if you're into that kind of thing. — CARYS ANDERSON

14th Annual Garden Party

THEATRE FAMILY COMMUNITY

SUNDAY 10, THE VORTEX

The fête champêtre, or rural party, was popular with 18th-century French nobility. According to the countess of Carnarvon's official blog, these were set within the beautiful Gardens of Versailles and filled by all the Franco-tomfoolery favored by the powdered-wig set. You, however, don't need to be royalty to cavort through the Vortex grounds at this upcoming fête champêtre. To enjoy the various activities — live music! Tiny Tails animal petting! Excerpts from upcoming Vortex Theater shows! — all you must be is pure of spirit and character. Oh, and if you want to bring a li'l donation to help keep the gardens running as a certified butterfly sanctuary, well. That'd be real kings and queens behavior. — JAMES SCOTT

SUNDAY 10, BOULDIN CREEK CAFE

Oh, my poor pocketbook. She cries for how empty she'll become after the marvelous market Eastside PopUp's got waiting this Sunday. Organized on the little lawn outside of vegan hotspot Bouldin Creek Cafe, the discerning shopper will find much to unburden their wallets for. Might you snap up an embroidered so-and-so from thread-smith Cousin Kenny's, or a comfy sweatshirt that also declares your support for Texas queers by Emsbryart? Perhaps you'll pick a piece of porcelain turned planter from Flora & Fauna, or munch a watermelon CBD gummy from Redeemer. These and many more futures await you in this bizarre bazaar. — JAMES SCOTT

Wednesday Trivia COMMUNITY

SUNDAY 10, THE VELVET CASKET

I'm getting a psychic premonition, much like a certain braid-wearing goth icon. With trivia questions focused on season 1 of the Tim Burton-directed and Jenna Ortega-starring Netflix show, you'll compete against other Addams addicts to win the creepy, kooky, and altogether ooky crown. Not ready to drop the $5 pay-to-play because you're an Addams Family Values purist? The Velvet Casket's free to enter, as is its mother store the Glass Coffin: Shop their gothic wares and find a dark-hearted treasure. Maybe there's a Thing in there just waiting to become your eternal companion. — JAMES SCOTT

English Country Dance COMMUNITY LEARNING

MONDAY 11, HANCOCK RECREATION CENTER

Circle left. Strip the willow. Ladies chain. Unsure what these phrases mean? Perhaps it's time your body got a move on over to the Traditional Austin Area Dance Association's weekly English country dance. Here you'll be instructed on the basics of ye olde contra dance – such that you've probably seen in Bridgerton, or Bridgerton foremother Jane Austen's many filmic adaptations. While TAADA doesn't require you bring a partner to attend, they do ask that you pay a $5 entrance fee and refrain from puffing up with perfume. This here's a fragrance-free event, m'lady. – JAMES SCOTT

Spring Break at the Bullock FAMILY COMMUNITY

MONDAY 11 - FRIDAY 15, BULLOCK MUSEUM

A whole week without school? What is a curious and unoccupied mind to do? Get those kiddos down to the Bullock Texas State History Museum to stave off boredom and give them something to chat about when school's back in session the next Monday. Each day's unique spring break activity is included with museum admission and coincides with the current shark exhibit, meaning kids will learn fun facts about the ocean through interactive activities and get up close and personal with some very cool shark stuff such as megalodon teeth. – KAT MCNEVINS

TUESDAY 12, BLANTON MUSEUM OF ART

Art! Oh, I love it. But sadly, when I open my pockets, moths fly out. Good news for me and all my broke friends: Every second Tuesday, the Blanton opens its doors to all visitors free of charge. Why, unburdened by the weight of an empty wallet, Austinites can mull the strange world of contemporary womanhood in "Unbreakable: Feminist Visions from the Gilberto Cárdenas and Dolores Garcia Collection." Or walk beneath the silver and mesh sculptures of Marie Watt's "Sky Dances Light." Or explore the past through its artistic pieces in "The Floating World: Masterpieces of Edo Japan." Or enjoy any of the many, MANY other exhibitions available on this day: all for free. – JAMES SCOTT

THE VERDE REPORT BY ERIC GOODMAN

Scoring Goals the Focus as Austin FC Returns Home

Austin FC's 2024 season has gotten off to a rather inauspicious start. After a disappointing 2-1 loss to Minnesota spoiled a rowdy Q2 Stadium atmosphere in the season opener, last Saturday the Verde and Black escaped its first road test of the season with a 0-0 draw against the Seattle Sounders that only a defender – or certain psychopath managers like José Mourinho and Diego Simeone – could love.

Josh Wolff isn't one of those managers. His obsession isn't defense, it's goals. And so far, Austin FC has just one to speak of. There are some caveats (or, if you prefer, excuses) to mention. The most glaring of which is that the club has not had Sebastián Driussi on the pitch yet this season. There was also some talk of slow, grabby turf at Lumen Field as well as a nasty Seattle weather forecast with temps in the high 30s and intermittent rain. But those details do little to justify the fact that Austin managed just two shots against Seattle's 23.

Fortunately for Austin, none of those 23 shots found the back of the net. A draw in Seattle is a positive result regardless of the circumstances, and Wolff chose to focus on that fact after the match rather than the lack of any attacking threat to speak of.

Fair enough. Fans don't have to like it, but a coach is well within his rights to accentuate the positive after his club earned its first point of the season and secured a hard-earned clean sheet. If every incomplete performance was met with abject negativity, he'd lose the locker room in a hurry. A decent portion of Austin FC's players, particularly defenders like Matt Hedges, left Seattle proud of how the club held firm in the face of constant pressure.

"Very proud of the work we put in tonight," Hedges emphasized. "As a back line and as a unit, we gained a lot of confidence from this performance."

Defensive midfielder Jhojan Valencia logged perhaps his best game as an Austin FC player, anchoring the club on both sides of the ball and earning himself a spot on MLS's team of the week.

If Wolff and his players can draw confidence from an unsightly stalemate in enemy territory, more power to them. But that confidence needs to translate on the pitch.

As El Tree returns home for back-to-back tough matchups at Q2 Stadium, the bar of expectation goes up. Starting Saturday against 2023 Western Conference pacesetters St. Louis City, Austin FC simply has to find some kind of offensive stride.

Driussi's return would certainly help things, but one player shouldn't make or break an entire system. Josh Wolff must figure out how to utilize the lesser – but still very capable – attacking players he has at his disposal. At the same time, those players need to step up and start making their coach look better than they have so far.

Gyasi Zardes, Diego Rubio, Jáder Obrian, and Ethan Finlay have all had plenty of MLS goalscoring success in years gone by. Emiliano Rigoni has scored goals in the UEFA Europa League. They are better than what they've shown donning the ATX "Armadillo Kit" this season.

This time, a scrappy 0-0 draw isn't going to cut it.

Austin FC faces St. Louis City Saturday, March 9, 7:30pm at Q2 Stadium.

TUESDAY 12, HOLE IN THE WALL

There will be no snoring nor tummy-rumbles this SXSW season, as event organizer Jocelyn Simone has curated a lineup that zaps the soul free from fatigue. Blasting out the windows of Quad staple Hole in the Wall will be over 22 bands "all championing female and queer inclusivity," or so says Simone's PR email. Among the lineup are gutter glam rockers Lord Friday the 13th, San-Fran shredmeisters Buzzed Lightbeer, and Canadian punks NOBRO. TUESDAY 12, DADALAB

While Downtown enjoys a big slobbery kiss with the behemoth known as South by Southwest, locals may prefer a quieter makeout among Austin area businesses. After all, you don't have to outsource to get that grindset mindset vibe. Here, in the halls of dadaLab, will be DJ sets by Orya, Tasha, deepvelvet, and NYC's High Waisted; panels from the folks behind Art Island, the Creative Admirer, Activation Angels, and Safe Circles; and "art experiences." To attend these enjoyments is free, but to unlock all the fun – like an afterparty featuring even more DJs as well as all-day free drinks – just drop a cool $40 for the VIP ticket. Wicked THEATRE

WEDNESDAY 13 - SUNDAY 31,
BASS CONCERT HALL

What was missing from the original Wizard of Oz movie? Not ruby slippers, or weird death-related on-set mythologies, but in-world political intrigue, discussions of oppression, and a sex club with a tiger. Gregory MacGuire's 1995 novel added those elements in with the crimson clogs to make an Oz lore twisty enough to grab the attention of Broadway bigwigs, who then made a musical of the same name. Strangely, they took out the tiger sex club, but added in songs that launched not one but two megastars in Kristin Chenoweth and the wi-cked-ly talented Idina Menzel. Catch the musical's run in Austin before the big-screen adaptation pops up in November, and join the elite class who can say "Pfft. I liked it better in the theatre." — JAMES SCOTT

Fall Out Boy

Friday 8, Moody Center

Back on Fueled by Ramen after releasing their debut album on the influential record label in 2003, Patrick Stump and company return to form on their eighth LP, So Much (for) Stardust. Produced by Neal Avron — who hadn't overseen an effort from the pop-punk-rock band since 2008's Folie à Deux — So Much offers a mixed bag of sounds ranging from disco basslines ("Hold Me Like a Grudge") to a bit of Phil Collins' "In the Air Tonight" on "Heaven, Iowa." Jimmy Eat World ("The Middle") is among the undercard acts.

First-Class French FOOD

Chef Jo Chan delivers delicious cuisine in former Hyde Park post office BY MELANIE HAUPT

I have lived in Central East Austin for nearly two decades and was a regular customer at the post office at 43rd and Speedway. So, I was less than pleased when its lease was not renewed and it closed in 2021, as there's really no other post office nearby half as convenient. That said, I'd be lying if I said I wasn't actually thrilled to have a bookstore, an upmarket bodega, and a French bistro occupying the space where I used to buy stamps and mail bills.

A partnership between former Top Chef contestant and Eberly Executive Chef Jo Chan and Tiny Grocer owner Steph Steele, Bureau de Poste inside Tiny Grocer anchors this exciting new development in a neighborhood prime for walkable amenities.

Four of us visited for an alfresco dinner on a very cold January night. We started with the Pommes Dauphine and endive salad. Of the pommes, the waiter explained that "they're kind of like bougie tater tots." (Narrator voice: They were not like bougie tater tots.) The four delicate, creamy potato croquettes were topped with fine herbs and a dollop of trout roe and served as a perfectly adequate amuse for the meal. The endive salad was spectacular: light and crisp, the bitter lettuce dancing gracefully with the tart citrus, the creamy comte cheese, and umami hazelnuts.

Our main courses were similarly delightful. My poisson à la plancha entrée, chosen out of a desire to make slightly more virtuous choices, comprised a beautifully seared fillet of cod, its luscious crust napped with a simple, elegant beurre blanc served alongside a small, lightly dressed green salad. I enjoyed every single bite, making sure to enjoy it slowly because it was a fairly modest portion. My spouse enjoyed his steak frites, a large boneless rib-eye cooked medium rare but with an expert char, served with a bright and kicky au poivre sauce.

My friend ordered the Bureau de Poste moules frites, a house recipe that departs from the classic preparation with a unique sauce made from tomatoes, bell pepper, and fennel; it was smoky and flavorful, complex but not overbearing. Her spouse ordered the duck leg cassoulet, which must have been delicious because he didn't share a single bite with any of us. (We all doubt his assertion that he felt bad about not sharing.)

Really, the only unsuccessful dish we had that first night was the caramel dark chocolate mousse, which arrived garnished with a hazelnut crumble and chantilly cream. It was a very pretty dish, but the texture was off. It was very thick and dense, almost like a chilled chocolate ganache. We wondered whether they'd forgotten to fold in the whipped cream when assembling the dessert. On the other hand, the crème brûlée was very nice, with a crisp, caramelized top we all jockeyed to crack with the back of a spoon. Split four ways, it was a delightful end to a deeply satisfying meal.

Most of our party opted for wine with our dinner; I started out with a glass of the Boxt red blend because I was curious about this Austin-based, woman-owned luxury wine brand. I quickly determined that it was not to my tastes, and so requested a glass of what my companions were having, the Presqu'île pinot noir from Santa Barbara, California. It was much more to my liking, a muscular balance of earth and spice. Was it the right wine to pair with cod? Of course not, but I couldn't fathom drinking a chilled wine while dining outside in 30 degrees.

My family and I returned for Sunday brunch a few weeks later and had a similarly pleasant time. My picky teen ordered a buttery, caramelized kouign-amann pastry sourced from Swedish Hill, along with a side of bacon – her two favorite food groups. She tried the frozen Shirley Temple, which was delicious but very heavy on the lime. My spouse ordered the eggs Benedict, which is topped with perfectly poached eggs and Bayonne ham, and enjoyed it very much. (This is notable because he famously detests ham.) I opted for the classic moules frites, a generous mound (more than two dozen) of bivalves swimming in a light, fragrant broth, served with a small side of fries and a few slices of baguette. The disproportionately small portion of frites/bread compared to the sharing-size portion of mussels was a little disappointing, but the flavors – garlic, butter, white wine – were spot on.

I'd be lying if I said I wasn't actually thrilled to have a bookstore, an upmarket bodega, and a French bistro occupying the space where I used to buy stamps and mail bills.

The highlight of the brunch for me, though, was the Cantratto spritz. The Italian aperitif, which is basically made for spritzing, is herbal and citrusy with a pop of licorice. I've been an Aperol spritz girlie for a few years now, but I think I have a new summer drink.

I can definitely see myself enjoying many more of these spritzes with my girlfriends on Bureau de Poste's lovely patio. Granted, our first introduction to it wasn't the best, because when making my (anonymous) reservation, the only seating options available had been outside. The host reassured us that the patio was heated, but it is really a patio with heaters and no wind breaks. The four of us were supplied with two high-quality serape blankets, but we were still pretty uncomfortable. That said, this is going to be the perfect spot come high patio weather, so make your reservations now.

In a gesture to the building's long history as a neighborhood post office, each table has a little flag on a rope that you can raise to summon a server, which is precious by half. If I'm raising a flag at a table in a restaurant, I'm going to expect a refill of fresh sopapillas to appear forthwith. And anyway, a well-trained professional server isn't going to need those kinds of cutesy visual cues to provide spectacular service.

Chan has trained her front-of-house staff well, generally speaking. On our first visit, our waiter was a bit condescending and prone to mansplaining. At this price point and in this neighborhood, waitstaff would do well to assume prior knowledge on their diners' part. Once he realized we hadn't just arrived from Hicksville, he relaxed and was less pedantic. Our server at brunch was much more laid-back and confident, friendly and attentive without being overbearing, and definitely made me want to come back so we could hang out some more.

So, despite the fact that I have to go out of my way to mail a package or buy a stamp these days, I'm beyond pleased that Bureau de Poste occupies the former post office space. Chan and Steele have devised a winning combination with their partnership, offering an intimate and convivial space to dine and shop. ■

A kung fu panda searches for his successor in this middling sequel BY RICHARD WHITTAKER

How long can high-kicking and dump-ling-loving Po (voiced by Jack Black) remain the Dragon Warrior? That's the question that starts the fourth theatrical feature in the Kung Fu Panda animated series, and it's answered quickly by his mentor, the irascible Master Shifu (Dustin Hoffman). The constantly exasperated teacher explains that his protégé's time as a butt-kicker is nearly over, as he must become more of a spiritual leader for the anthropomorphic creatures that inhabit the Valley of Peace.

Fortunately for Po, he doesn't have to choose a successor from among his close friends, as the Furious Five are all ... away doing other good deeds offscreen. This makes it blindingly obvious that the story is setting up the conveniently newly arrived pickpocket fox Zhen (Awkwafina) as the next Dragon Warrior, because she's basically the only other character with lines. Of course she has to overcome her roguish ways, which means dealing with new villain the Chameleon (Viola Davis), a shape-shifting lizard crime lord with predictable plans for world domination.

Maybe the Furious Five aren't the only thing that's missing. In the 16 years, two sequels, and three episodic spin-offs (the excellent Legends of Awesomeness and the perfectly fine Paws of Destiny and The Dragon Knight) since the 2008 original, the world of Po has become surprisingly deep and rich. So while it may seem nitpicky to complain about the absence of Lady Tiger, a sequel without her seems somehow lesser. The films have always been warmly touching, and so depriving Po of his de facto family deflates that sensation. The fuzzy fighter became a beloved character not because of Black's funny delivery, but because he imbued the furry fanboy with a heartfelt charm. That's only here in flashes, and those moments are incredibly welcome.

Yes, there are some chortles to be had from some of the sight gags (Po falling off, into, or over something will never not elicit a chuckle). Yet the film feels most Kung Fu Panda-ish when he's not there, and instead the story focuses on his two dads, biological father Li Shan (a charmingly goofy Bryan Cranston) and adoptive goose noodle-slinger Mr. Ping (the inimitable James Hong). The easy path would be to have them overcome their differences to rescue their boy. Instead, the script by series creators Jonathan Aibel and Glenn Berger, and franchise newcomer Darren Lemke (who put words into Black's mouth for Goosebumps) makes them good friends and doting fathers, at points literally lifting each other up.

Po falling off, into, or over something will never not elicit a chuckle.

But that main story feels both laden down with the series' history and bereft of it. Sure, the kids will giggle, and the animation is well-executed (even if there does seem to be something a little off around the eyes in this version of Po) but it just doesn't land with that same ebullient skadoosh. If this truly is the end of Po's journey as the Dragon Warrior, and he can finally embrace change, then maybe the story should have felt more like the end of an era. Dreamworks closed the How to Train Your Dragon trilogy with exactly such bittersweet resonance in The Hidden World: by comparison, this parting of the ways feels more like a wandering off. **■

A Garden of Vegetal Delights

Malou Flato explores the natural world in “Greatest Hits” exhibition BY WAYNE ALAN BRENNER

The life of plants and their gambits of sustenance and reproduction provide human eyes with some of the more wonderful sights in this world. So many diverse biological systems evolved toward the miracles of photosynthesis and pollination, now long supplying our planet’s collection of creatures with food, with the very air we need to survive – and all that botanical splendor is the embodiment of forms following such function.

Artists, too, provide visions for viewing, often delighting senses in ways that help to make life a pleasure beyond merely surviving in it, and sometimes – perhaps inevitably – an artist will choose to express the beauty of our natural world, the landscapes, the bright floral exuberance of whatever a biome can support. This is what Malou Flato does.

Born in Corpus Christi in 1953 and now living and working in Austin (with a second studio on her great-grandfather’s ranch in the Texas Hill Country’s Edwards County), Flato causes a world of flowers and more to bloom where only blank walls were before, meticulously applying pigment to surface, rendering intimate images of botany at the edge of hyperrealism.

“A teacher of mine, Roberto Juarez, introduced me to a Japanese paper that appears translucent,” the artist notes on her website. “I paint both sides and guide the colors as they bleed through – you see all the paint on both sides. The paper seems to disappear and is just a vehicle that holds paint.”

Flato – who has also worked in costume design, printmaking, digital prints, ceramic tiles, and sculpture throughout her career – has, with this newest solo show at Davis Gallery, moved beyond paper and brought her renditions even further in terms of permanence and size. The artist’s “Greatest Hits” exhibition, which runs through April 6, displays a panoply of paintings – stunning portraits of cacti, succulents, deciduous flowering trees, lupines (the beloved Texas bluebonnets), and more – and each of the plants is captured via Flato’s well-practiced brushes in oil on canvas, 5-foot-by-6-foot canvas, turning the Davis Gallery’s tony but welcoming interior into a polychrome garden of vegetal delights.

The level of accuracy in these painted creations is, frankly, astonishing at times. One wishes to move in close, to make sure that the hi-res effect of the thick crimson fruits in Flato’s Tasajillo, for instance, isn’t the result of digital or photographic wizardry; but one hesitates, not wanting to get too near and thus be impaled on the long thin spikes jutting from the cactus’ branches. This is two-dimensional work? That seems capable of drawing blood? Ouch – that’s realism.

And this gallery-gathered garden isn’t populated with plants from some far-flung corner of the globe, but with plants that are, so to speak, among our cherished friends and neighbors here in the Lone Star State. If you’ve ever hiked your way over Enchanted Rock or other parts of the Hill Country – or, hell, if you’ve merely paid attention to what’s growing around you in Austin’s somewhat more asphalt-cloaked neighborhoods – this “Greatest Hits” show will reward you with an occasional thrill of recognition: “Hey, I know that guy! That’s a Pride of Barbados, like the one in my Tía Isabel’s front yard!”

“Texas is my inspiration,” says Flato, in the exhibition’s notes. “I have made my life here, and I would like to think that my art reflects the place I know best – and that maybe I’m adding something worthy to the visual and cultural scenery.”

We can affirm – and you can see for yourself, citizen, at Davis Gallery right now – that Malou Flato is adding something very worthy indeed. ■

At Besame Mucho, a Latin Music Capital Por Nosotros

MUSIC

Inside the all-star, vaquero-chic, 84-band, Spanish-language spectacle BY RAOUL HERNANDEZ

Booked like first-year Lollapalooza and staged à la ACL Fest, Circuit of the Americas' Latin music eclipse, Besame Mucho on March 2, manifested a first for Austin and who knows where else: an alternate reality. Brown music for brown people, tens of thousands of them, of US – ustedes, nosotros – in every size and shape and skin tone, and not one dressed down for an all-star Spanish-language spectacle as deep and vast as a Hill Country night.

Running 11am-11pm and listing 84 acts on four stages, the racetrack concert site still comes off as largely inhospitable. As far back as Mayhem Fest one apocalyptic August in 2013 at the then-Austin360 Amphitheater, the terrain blew a cloud of dust and grit akin to festival staging in a rock quarry. A decade hasn't improved conditions much, but the footprint for Besame Mucho proved largely brilliant.

Enclosing a large but never slobby roundabout, way better and more diverse food booths in the ACL style formed an outside circle to the grounds, with bars either accompanying or dividing up the stage quadrants of three headliner platforms and a slightly smaller fourth one. All employed revolving stages resembling those used on rodeo floors: spin the band! One set finishes, dudes clear the cables and outcroppings, and the whole riser revolves to reveal another ready-to-go Latin superstar.

Case in point: switchover from Spanish folk metallers Mägo de Oz to Argentine alt-rockers Enanitos Verdes on the Rockero stage went off more like a magic trick. What some assumed was an encore of the former band actually kicked off the latter group. Madrid's Jethro Tull/Iron Maiden mix transitioned to Rock en Español anthems spanning 45 years in the blink of an eye.

Enanitos Verdes ventures here more than most, but playing to their native demographic, they could hardly be heard over the audience harmonizing. That proved the case for all headliners starting at dusk. Casual observers appeared few and far amongst the Latin-born and bred into this music.

Even in a state where country music dominates, urban sophisticates get antsy in a large gathering of hat-wearing Southwesterners. At Besame Mucho, cowboy hats rivaled any C&W summit, yet the contemporary vaquero look – women in shorts and boots, and men sporting sunglasses and open shirts – strutted and preened with head-swiveling chic in comparison to most REI-assisted festgoers of the boomer and/or collegial set. Carnival-sized Day of the Dead decor rose equally striking all over the grounds, including a 20-foot red and undead chihuahua sitting between the Las Clasicas and Te Gusta el Pop? stages.

Chilean slickers La Ley thinned out Enanitos' boomer choir with Nineties arena rock, so a trip to El Pop uncorked Sin Bandera. Mexico City duo of brains (Leonel Garcia) and beauty (Argentine hunk Noel Schajris), they roused aspirational balladry in the musical vicinity of Christian pop. The former held down the band as the latter shucked his shirt and parted the crowd with his sculpted torso.

Mexican rap-metal legacy Molotov lit the fuse on the Rockero stage, concentrating a sea of leather-wearers with swaggering riffs and beats. Raging against the machine one electroclash moment then pulling back proto-tropically the next, they headbanged throughout. 1997's "Puto" bounced thousands like a trampoline.

Over on Las Clasicas, El Tri mainstay Alex Lora also brought out the "puto" for a throng of native speakers. Dressed in Eighties leathers like Scorpions bandleader Klaus Meine, the Puebla-born pottymouth, 71, yowled like an alley cat in manner befitting a Mexican institution reaching back to the late Seventies and once called their country's Rolling Stones. Then again, "Triste Canción de Amor" brought out the cell lights, and in a luchador mask, Lora rasped a snippet of the festival's theme song.

Grammy-winning accordion king Ramón Ayala, 78, held court there next, disarming the swelling masses with a swooning romanticism in standards such as "Rinconcito en el Cielo," "Cuando Yo Era un Jovencito," and "Tragos Amargos." Fellow Ciudad de Mexico hit men Café Tacuba, who played the second Lollapalooza in 1992, similarly electrified a younger demographic with buoyant and trademark pop existentialism courting a timelessness reminiscent of the Cure, Depeche Mode, and the Smiths.

Mexican rock rarity Caifanes followed on the Rockero stage by working the nuanced edges of guitar-driven New Wave, while ladies ruled the Pop platform. Monterrey-born Gloria Trevi stomped mainstage divahood while shucking outfit layers like a nesting doll. Lake Charles twosome Ha*Ash pranced and pounded a keyboard or two, and Alejandra Guzman ignited power ballads courting Bonnie Tyler's "Total Eclipse of the Heart."

Six hours vested and temperature dropping, we trekked the mile-plus back to the car, missing Juanes and Los Tigres del Norte, but awed by a glimpse at an alternative Texas, an alternate sonic dimension, and the ever-universal convergence of live music capitalists in Austin, Texas. ■

A DIFFERENT KIND OF DOCTOR

A local Doctor provides truly compassionate care and proven solutions for chronic pain and complicated conditions.

Care Rooted in Empathy & Experience

Do you ever wonder why some Doctors are so incredibly compassionate while others have a bedside manner better suited for the DMV?

In the case of Dr. Lucas Brown, DAOM, LAC of Rosedale Acupuncture & Wellness Center it is a case of true empathy. "In my 20's I was dealing with crippling anxiety and insomnia. It was the type of chronic suffering not visible to the naked eye. Experiencing how isolating it was to endure in silence set me on a path to look for a better solution to chronic health issues."

Dr. Brown's options were limited to two things. Prescription medications that often did not work and had come with a host of side effects, or to make lifestyle changes to attempt to limit the symptoms. "It was no way to live," he shares "I was young and should've been living a bright, vibrant life. Instead I was hesitant to leave the house, tired all the time and felt very alone. The only thing doctors were able to offer was another pill." It wasn't until he went to an acupuncturist that he found real relief.

This is why I often refer to my practice as "The Last Resort With The Best Results," You've been everywhere else and been given the same disheartening prognosis, prescribed the same medications and told, "this is just something you're going to have to learn to live with."

Soon after his incredible experience with the healing arts he made the life changing decision to pursue his doctorate in acupuncture and Chinese Herbal Medicine. On that journey, he found solutions that worked for him and were also able to help so many others.

"Acupuncture quite literally changed my life and I want to share that with the world," he proclaims.

Your Golden Years Should Be Golden

While in school he watched as his aunt began to suffer from Peripheral Neuropathy. "Your golden years should be golden, not plagued with insufferable pain while doctors and specialists tell you there is nothing they can do." Understanding that Eastern Medicine excels where Western Medicine fails, Dr. Brown set forth to develop treatment protocols for all variations of Peripheral Neuropathy (including diabetic and chemotherapy-induced) and now has a 90% success rate in treating this once difficult to manage condition.

"I was tired of seeing the older generation suffer unnecessarily," shares Dr. Brown. "Diagnosing them as just getting older and giving them a treatment plan of 'you're just going to have to get used to it has never sat well with me so I wanted to offer them a real option for treatment and care."

Dr. Brown has designed similar treatment protocols for other complicated, chronic conditions including fibromyalgia, rheumatoid arthritis, post-shingles pain, and even macular degeneration. While each patient plan is tailored specifically to the patient's concern and goals, all of his treatments are based on a framework that's over fourteen years in the making.

In addition Dr. Brown isn't opposed to more modern medical solutions. "It's in blending the time-tested science of acupuncture with recent innovations in medicine that get me the best results."

One of those advancements is ATP Resonance Bio Therapy, originally developed by NASA, it aids nerves in regeneration by providing them the nutrients they need to repair and renew, "very similar to what water does for a plant!"

The Magic of Compassionate Care

And what do those in his care have to say? "Dr. Brown looked me in my eyes and wanted to know about me, not just my condition. I feel like a person, not just a patient," shares Joan. "In fact I don't think he's never used the word patient." Others proclaim "he saved my life", "his neuropathy treatments gave me my life back, and "it's a miracle he treated my fibromyalgia, I don't know how else to explain it."

Dr. Brown has a long personal history in complicated, difficult to understand conditions and understands how tragic it can all be if left untreated. "I have sat where my patients sit. I've experienced their pain and suffering on an intimate level. It's why I practice the brand of medicine I do and why I've made it my life's mission to treat the "untreatable." It brings me such incredible joy when I get to say, "I can help you!"

Furthermore, Dr. Brown has surrounded himself with staff that embraces this same approach to patient care. "You can ask any one of my patients and they will tell you that their favorite part about Rosedale Acupuncture & Wellness Center is my staff."

Dr. Brown and his staff specialize in treating chronic pain, complicated neurological conditions and autoimmune diseases that leave other professionals scratching their heads. Dr. Lucas Brown, DAOM, LAC has won 'Best Acupuncturist' in Austin for 6 years running.

The Luv Doc

Dear Luv Doc,

Me and my wife used to go out to clubs and see live music regularly back before we had kids. Now the oldest is out of the house and the other two might as well be. They are both in high school and spend a lot of time with their friends, so we have been going out more in the past year or so. At first we were having a lot of fun, but recently my wife says that she is "feeling too old" at some of the clubs that we go to and says that she would rather stay home than feel like "the oldest person in the club." I think she is exaggerating. I see people our age in clubs all the time, but I will admit that I have seen some of the younger people in clubs give us sideways glances. Unlike my wife, I don't care what people think. I just want to go have fun. What can I do to get my wife to go with me?

— The Old People Up by the Stage

"Gold Bond"

The most adorable thing about young people is that, in general, they share the belief that other people care about what they do and how they behave. They're sort of right. Those people actually do exist. They're called marketers. Old people, of course, know that marketers are Satan's minions and can therefore suck a bag of demon dicks. Old people are hep to life's dirty little secret: Other than marketers and your mother, nobody is paying attention to what you do or how you behave unless you're hearing their Grams. Ever it has been thus since time immemorial – and by "time immemorial" I am of course referring the pre-pandemic years, the memory of which for me has been decimated by at least three official bouts with COVID. The bottom line is that since late 2021, my mind is basically a tabula rasa. Sorry if I owe you money or borrowed your lawnmower. On the bright side, I am mercifully unburdened by uncharitable pessimism or rhetorical restraint. I feel free to say what I think – much like Emma Stone's character in Poor Things, although perhaps without the libidinous compulsion to masturbate while doing so. I'd say that's a big win for everyone, wouldn't you?

But the youth? Yeah, they can be judgy – probably because they are in such good practice from judging themselves. The criticisms they concoct in their minds are always much worse than the ones they encounter in the real world. That's why it's extra important that people like yourself and your wife – people ... shall we say ... with a lot of "life experience" ... walk bravely amongst the youth and make things super awkward. Fuck it. Wear something extra sexy ... with a plunging neckline. Otherwise, what will Austin become? Some thoroughly homogenized, milquetoast, bottle-serviced, selfie-popping, dress-coded, plastic-surgered, eternally youthful douchetropolis? I mean, arguably Austin already is that, but we can't just roll over and let the weirdness die simply because we're feeling judged. Gross. What is this? Dallas? We need to mount a resistance – like the French. They didn't just roll over for the Nazis (OK they sort of did), they went underground and were super annoying – like even more annoying than the French normally are – for the remainder of the war. Eventually the allies retook France and the French Resistance felt like they contributed. That's called a win-win.

Look, I know you – and more importantly your wife – are not solely responsible for keeping Austin awkward, but we have to start somewhere, and the youth are way too self-conscious, smooth-skinned, and attractive to be effective freak flag standard bearers. Hell, they can barely find their asses with both hands – and they probably won't even try because people are looking. Also, I know it's not easy being a lightning rod for scorn, derision, and judgment merely for the sin of having survived longer than just about everyone else in the room, but that's precisely why you're most qualified. Lastly, there is strength in numbers, and I bet you have some similarly aged friends that you could invite along to take some of the heat off your wife. I think even old people would agree that the only thing more awkward than a couple of old people in a young people's nightclub is a whole group of them. Smells Like Teen Spirit? No, smells like Gold Bond.

Mr. Smarty Pants Knows

Peanuts are not part of an elephant's daily diet, either in the wild or in human care.

Every year, the world consumes about 80 billion new pieces of clothing.

Giovanni Caselli (1815-1891) invented the pantelegraph, the world's first facsimile machine. It was capable of transmitting sketches and handwritten words over telegraph wires using non-conductive ink on tin foil. The receiving machine drew the image line by line with blue ink on white paper.

Bill Thompson (1913-1971) was the voice of Droopy the Dog for Tex Avery, but when his acting work wound down, he became an executive at Union Oil in 1957 working in community relations. He also voiced at least five parts in Disney's Lady and the Tramp.

Missouri, North Carolina, and Georgia have the least expensive cigarette prices, less than $6 per pack.

Above is information that Mr. Smarty Pants read in a book, a magazine, or the newspaper; heard on the radio; saw on television; or overheard at a party. Got facts? Write to Mr. Smarty Pants at the Chronicle, or email mrpants@austinchronicle.com.

FREE WILL ASTROLOGY MAR. 8 - MAR. 14

by Rob Breznsky

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): I invite you to entertain the following theory: Certain environments, companions, and influences enhance your intelligence, health, and ability to love – while others either do the opposite or have a neutral effect. If that's true, it makes good sense for you to put yourself in the presence of environments, companions, and influences that enhance you. The coming weeks will be an excellent time to test this theory. I hope you will do extensive research and then initiate changes that implement your findings.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): "Everyone has talent. What is rare is the courage to follow talent to the dark place where it leads." So wrote Aries author Erica Jong. Is that true? Is it hard to access the fullness of our talents? Must we summon rare courage and explore dark places? Sometimes, yes. To overcome obstacles that interfere with ripening our talents, there may be tough work to do. I suspect the coming weeks and months will be one of those phases for you, Aries. But here's the good news: I predict you will succeed.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): In October 1879, Thomas Edison and his research team produced the first electric light bulb that was viable enough to be of practical use. In September 1882, Edison opened the first power plant on the planet, enabling people to light their homes with the new invention. That was a revolutionary advance in a very short time. Dear Taurus, the innovations you have been making and I hope will continue to make are not as monumental as Edison's. But I suspect they rank high among the best and brightest in your personal life history. Don't slack off now. There's more work to be done – interesting, exciting work!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): I watched as the Thai snake charmer kissed a poisonous cobra, taming the beast's danger with her dancing hands. I beheld the paramedic dangle precariously from a helicopter to snag the woman and child stranded on a rooftop during a flood. And in my dream, I witnessed three of my Gemini friends singing a dragon to sleep, enabling them to ramble freely across the bridge the creature had previously forbidden them to traverse.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The horoscopes you are reading have been syndicated in publications all over the world: the U.S., Italy, France, Japan, Canada, Mexico, Australia, Netherlands, Russia, Cambodia, Singapore, Hong Kong, Venezuela, Ireland, and Finland. Yet it has never appeared in a publication in the UK, where there are over 52 million people whose first language is English – the same as mine. But I predict that will change in the coming months: I bet a British newspaper or website will finally print Free Will Astrology. I prophesy comparable expansions in your life, too, fellow Cancerian. What new audiences or influences or communities do you want to be part of? Make it happen!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Author Jean-Dominique Bauby wrote, "Today it seems to me that my whole life was nothing but a string of small near misses." If you have endured anything resembling that frustration, Leo, I have good news: The coming months won't bring you a string of small near misses. Indeed, the number of small near misses will be very few, maybe even zero. Instead, I predict you will gather an array of big, satisfying completions. Life will honor you with bull's-eyes, direct hits, and master strokes. Here's the best way you can respond to your good fortune and ensure the arrival of even more good fortune: Share your wealth!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Virgo advice expert Cheryl Strayed wrote some rather pushy directions I will borrow and use for your horoscope. She and I say, "You will never have my permission to close yourself off to love and give up. Never. You must do everything you can to get what you want and need, to find 'that type of love.' It's there for you." I especially want you to hear and meditate on this guidance right now, Virgo. Why? Because I believe you are in urgent need of re-dedicating yourself to your heart's desire. You have a sacred duty to intensify your imagination and deepen your willpower as you define what kind of love and tenderness and togetherness you want most.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Author Adam Alter writes, "Perfect success is boring and uninspiring, and abject failure is exhausting and demoralizing. Somewhere between these extremes is a sweet spot that maximizes long-term progress." And what is the magic formula? Alter says it's when you make mistakes an average of 18 percent of the time and are successful 84 percent. Mistakes can be good because they help you learn and grow. Judging from your current astrological omens, Libra, I'm guessing you're in a phase when your mistake rate is higher than usual – about 30 percent. (Though you're still 70 percent successful!) That means you are experiencing expanded opportunities to learn all you can from studying what doesn't work well. (Adam Alter's book is Anatomy of a Breakthrough: How to Get Unstuck When It Matters Most.)

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Sometimes you Scorpios are indeed secretive, as traditional astrologers assert. You understand that knowledge is power, and you build your potency by gathering information other people don't have the savvy or resources to access. But it's also true that you may appear to be secretive when in fact you have simply perceived and intuited more than everyone else wants to know. They might be overwhelmed by the deep, rich intelligence you have acquired – and would actually prefer to be ignorant of it. So you're basically hiding stuff they want you to hide. Anyway, Scorpio, I suspect now is a time when you are loading up even more than usual with juicy gossip, inside scoops, tantalizing mysteries, taboo news, and practical wisdom that few others would be capable of managing. Please use your superpowers with kindness and wisdom.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Here's a little-known fact about me: I am the priest, wizard, rabbi, and pope of Parish #31025 in the Universal Life Church. One of my privileges in this role is to perform legal marriages. It has been a few years since I presided over anyone's wedding, but I am coming out of semi-retirement to consecrate an unprecedented union. It's between two aspects of yourself that have not been blended but should be blended. Do you know what I'm referring to? Before you read further, please identify these two aspects. Ready? I now pronounce you husband and wife, or husband and husband, or wife and wife, or spouse and spouse – or whatever you want to be pronounced.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): "You don't have to suffer to be a poet," said poet John Ciardi. "Adolescence is enough suffering for anyone." I will add that adolescence is enough suffering for everyone, even if they're not a poet. For most of us, our teenage years brought us streams of angst, self-doubt, confusion, and fear – sufficient to last a lifetime. That's the bad news, Capricorn. The good news is that the coming months will be one of the best times ever for you to heal the wounds left over from your adolescence. You may not be able to get a total cure, but 65% is very possible. Seventy-five percent isn't out of the question. Get started!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A psychic once predicted that I would win a Grammy award for my music. She said my dad and mom would be in the audience, smiling proudly. Well, my dad died four years ago, and I haven't produced a new album of songs for over ten years. So that Grammy prophecy is looking less and less likely. I should probably give up hope that it will come to pass. What about you, Aquarius? Is there any dream or fantasy you should consider abandoning? The coming weeks would be a good time to do so. It could open your mind and heart to a bright future possibility now hovering on the horizon.

NOTICE ATTENTION: AUSTIN COUNTY MUNICIPAL UTILITY DISTRICT NO. 1 (the "MUD" or "PETITIONER") DIRECTS THIS NOTICE TO ALL PERSONS WHO RESIDE IN THE TERRITORY OF THE MUD; WHO OWN PROPERTY LOCATED WITHIN THE MUD; WHO ARE TAXPAYERS OF THE MUD; WHO HAVE OR CLAIM A RIGHT, TITLE, OR INTEREST IN ANY PROPERTY OR MONEY TO BE AFFECTED BY A PUBLIC SECURITIES AUTHORIZATION OR THE ISSUANCE OF THE PUBLIC SECURITIES ("INTERESTED PARTIES") AND THE TEXAS ATTORNEY GENERAL, ADVISING THEM OF THEIR RIGHT TO APPEAR FOR TRIAL AND SHOW CAUSE WHY THE PETITION DESCRIBED HEREIN SHOULD NOT BE GRANTED.

Please take notice that on February 29, 2024, the Petitioner filed an Original Petition for Expedited Declaratory Judgment (the "Petition") under Texas Government Code Chapter 1205 to Affirm, among other things, the bonding and financing for the MUD.

Among other things, the Petition seeks declarations that (i) Creation of the District was duly confirmed by the voters within the District voting on Proposition A of the election conducted by the District on November 2, 2021 (the "Election"); (ii) the District is authorized to issue its bonds (water, sewer, drainage) secured by ad valorem taxes levied within the District pursuant to Proposition B of the Election;

(iii) the District is authorized to issue its bonds (water, sewer, drainage refunding) secured by ad valorem taxes levied within the District pursuant to Proposition C of the Election; (iv) the District is authorized to issue its bonds (roads) secured by ad valorem taxes levied within the District pursuant to Proposition D of the Election; (v) the District is authorized to issue its bonds (roads refunding) secured by ad valorem taxes levied within the District pursuant to Proposition E of the Election; (vi) the District is authorized to levy its ad valorem tax for maintenance purposes (water, sewer, drainage) within the District pursuant to Proposition F of the Election; (vii) the District is authorized to levy its ad valorem tax for maintenance purposes (roads) within the District pursuant to Proposition G of the Election; (viii) the (5) persons receiving majority votes at the Election conducted by the are the duly elected directors of the District; and (ix) all actions taken by the Temporary Directors, as ratified by the Directors elected on November 2, 2021 are the duly authorized actions of the District. A full description of the lawsuit and the relief sought, which more fully describes the relief sought, is contained in the City's Petition in a case styled AUSTIN COUNTY MUNICIPAL UTILITY DISTRICT NO. 1 VS. ALL TAXPAYERS, PROPERTY OWNERS AND RESIDENTS, IF ANY, OF AUSTIN COUNTY MUNICIPAL UTILITY DISTRICT NO. 1; Cause No. D-1-GN-24-001277 in the 345th Judicial District Court of Travis County, Texas, and is available for review by all persons, including the interested Parties. All interested Parties and the Honorable Ken Paxton, in his official capacity as Attorney General of the State of Texas, are hereby notified of their right to appear for trial, on March 25, 2024, at 10:00 a.m., in the District Court of Travis County, Texas, at the Travis County Civil & Family Courts Facility, 1700 Guadalupe St., Austin, Texas 78701 and show cause why the Petition should not be granted and the public securities or the public security authorization validated and confirmed. Be on further notice that, at trial the Court will proceed to a full and final hearing on the merits of all matters and prayers within the Petition.

LEGAL NOTICES

PUBLICATION FOR JUAN GUERRA
CAUSE NO: D-1-GN-23-001706
RICHARD CHAVEZ, Plaintiff VS.
JUAN GUERRA, Defendant
IN THE DISTRICT COURT 353RD JUDICIAL DISTRICT TRAVIS COUNTY, TEXAS
On this the 21st day of February 2024, Plaintiff's Motion for Substitute Service of Process by Publication for JUAN GUERRA, was considered by the Court. The Court, after considering the Motion and supporting affidavits, finds the Plaintiff's attempts to serve, the Defendant, JUAN GUERRA, constitute due diligence and have been unsuccessful and find the substitute service requested in Plaintiff's motion will be reasonably effective to give Defendant, JUAN GUERRA, notice of the suit. IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED, and the court grants the motion and authorizes substitute service on Defendant, JUAN GUERRA, by publication in The Austin Chronicle. SIGNED AND ENTERED on this 21st day of February 2024.
